Ready

for the future

Regular readers of LAYERS will have seen something of the significant investments we have made in our infrastructure, global organization, processes and products over the last few years. That investment continues as we keep a close watch on what our markets and customers will demand in the next 10 years.

In this edition of LAYERS however, you can read how some of these investments have already benefitted our customers in daily life. From the service management tool used by our expanded service organization that keeps us on top of customer issues around the globe 24/7, to the investment in panel processing technology that has created a production tool ready for the next industry challenges in Advanced Packaging, we remain fixed on delivering the best customer value in our industry. Of course that means delivering tools today that run our customers' current processes at class leading uptime and yield, but it also means helping them for the future. The Evatec Competence Laboratory (ECL) which opened on track in early 2019 is an example of just that, adding value by supporting new process developments for products to be launched in 2025 and beyond.

I hope you enjoy reading news of our people and capabilities across each of our Business Units in LAYERS 5.
